SAN FRANCISCO
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ANNUAL STATISTICAL REPORT

FISCAL YEAR 1979-1980

DOCUMENTS DEPT

LIBRARY

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

During the report period, the library: acquired 79,458 volumes, loaned 2.3 million items for home use, and responded to 987,000 requests for information.

The library's collections now include: 1.7 million cataloged volumes, 6,689 periodical titles, 25,000 sound recordings, 412 videotapes, and 350 art works for loan.

Last year, the main library and the branches sponsored or conducted 636 public programs attended by 22,011 adults. Programs having an identifiable appeal to ethnic minorities included: 9 Black, 4 Filipino, 37 Asian, and 17 Hispanic.

In addition to the audience for adult programs, 42,804 children participated in such events as pre-school and regular story-hours, film, filmstrip, and video programs, visits from nursery schools and classes, puppet shows, etc. Dial-a-Story (626-6516) entertains callers around the clock with new three-minute stories presented weekly.

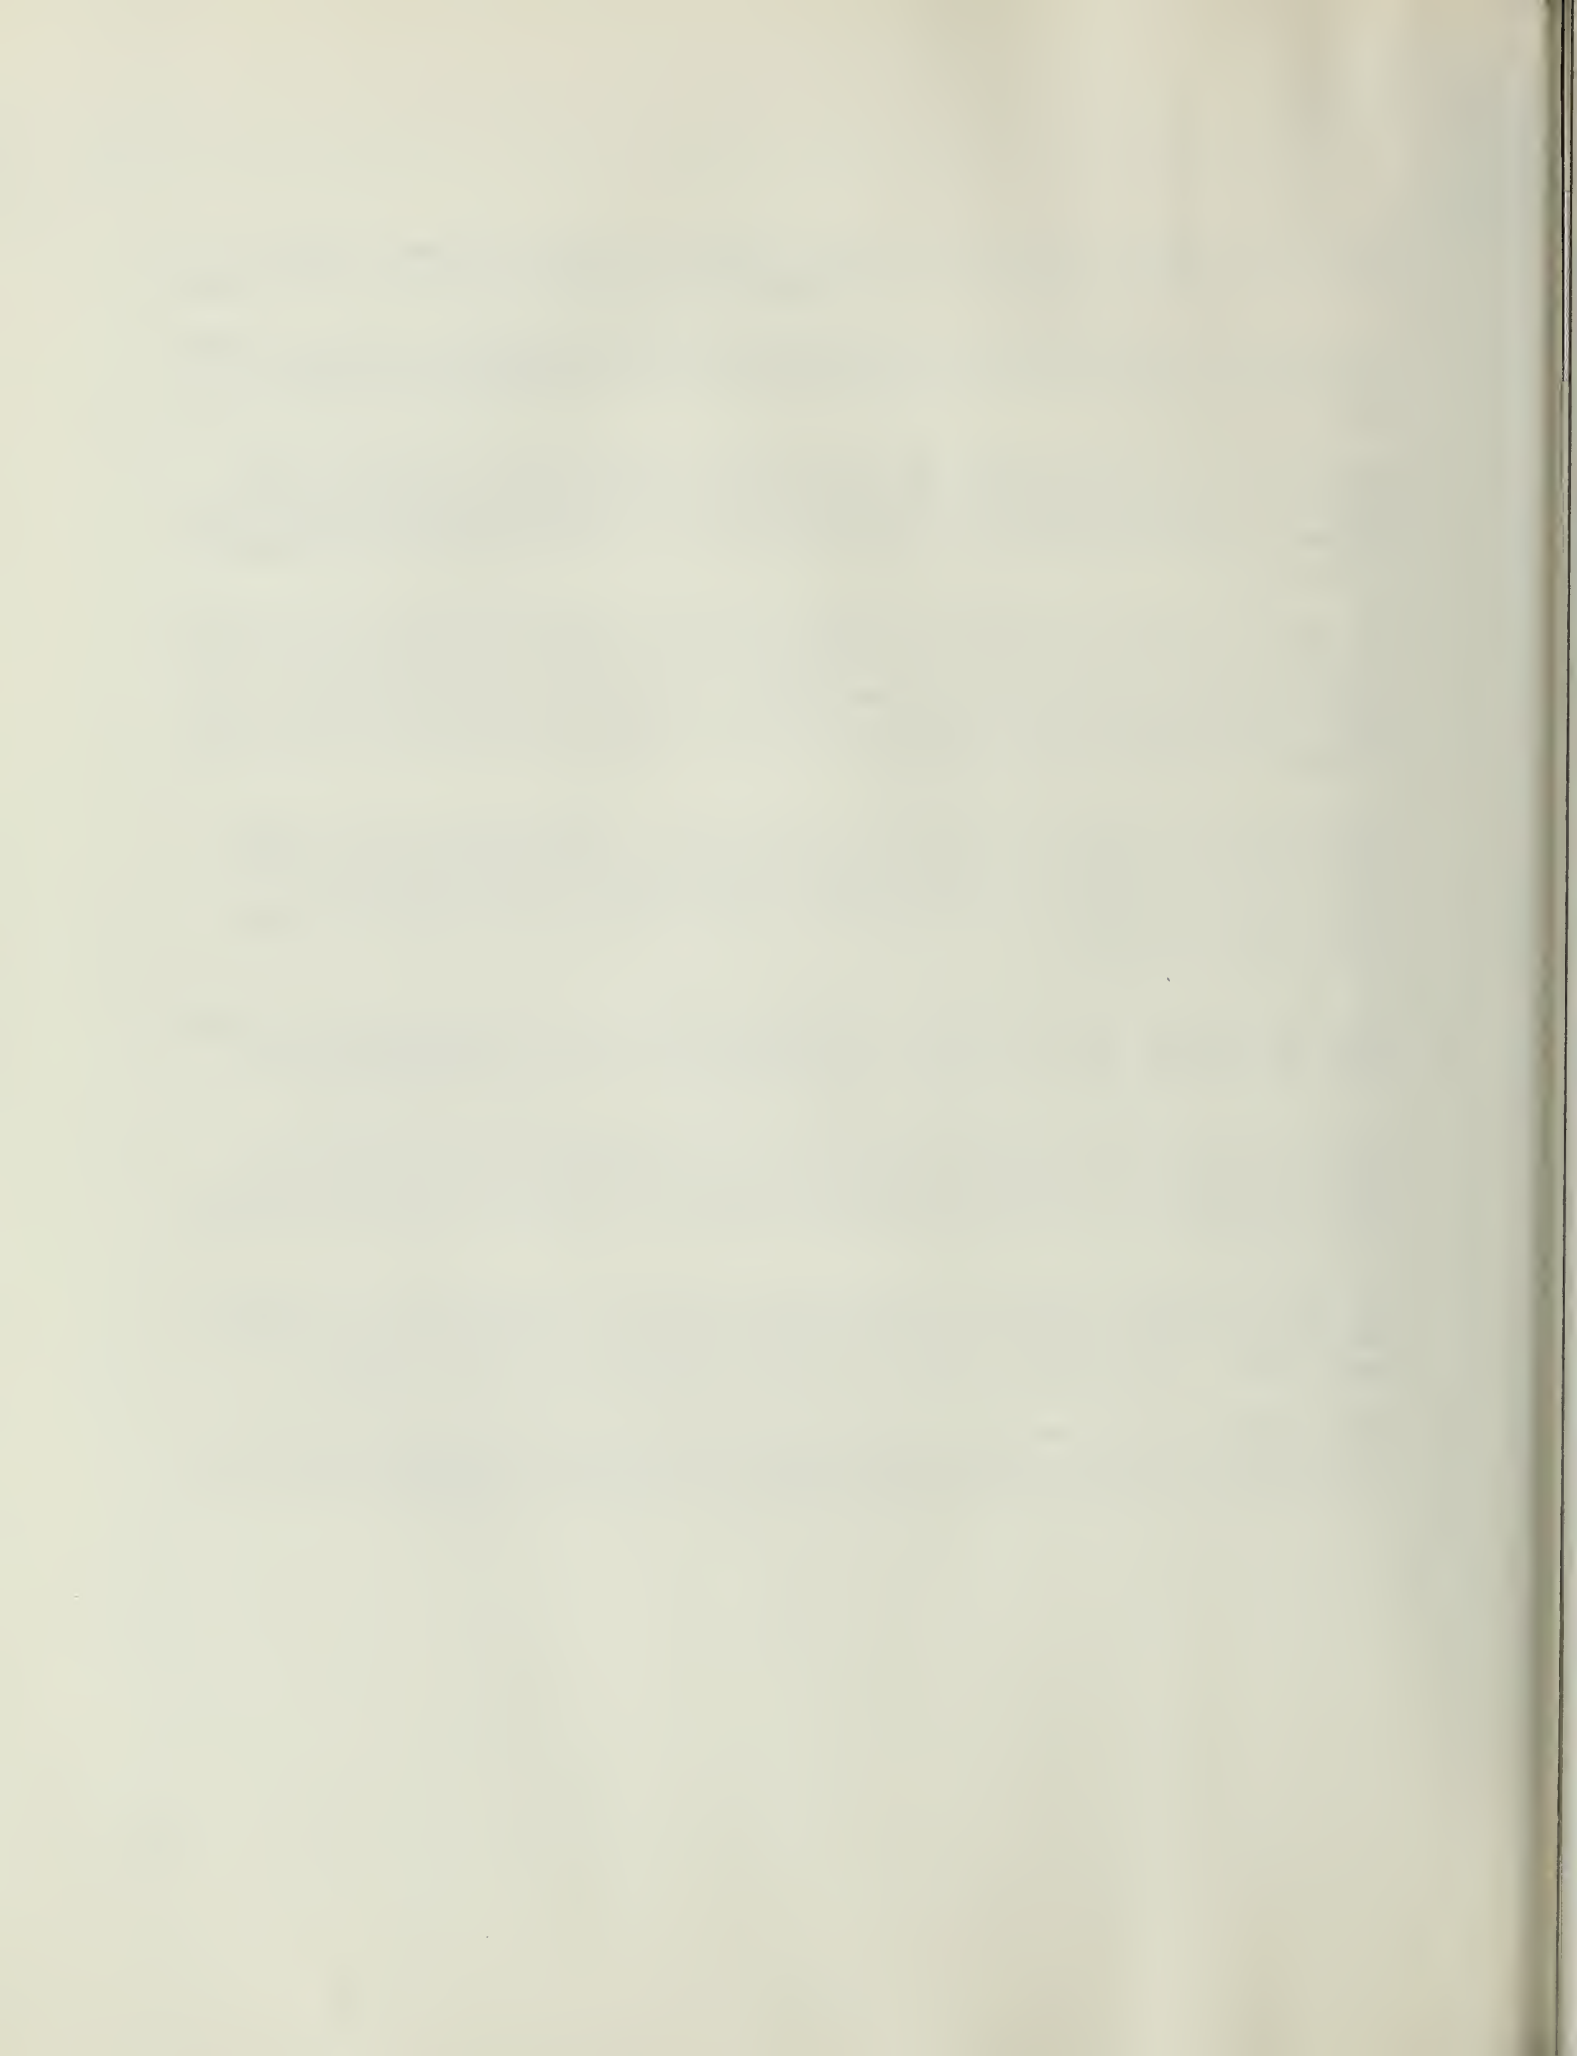

The library's Communications Center offers more than 40,000 Talking Books and cassettes to about 1,000 blind or visually handicapped users. About 75% of this clientele is over age 65. The Center is also building its collection of signed or captioned films and videotapes to serve the deaf and hearing-impaired.

By means of stringent internal position control, the library went the second mile in meeting salary savings. The budgeted amount of mandatory salary savings of $248,835 was exceeded by $120,548 for a total of $369,383.

Further savings in personnel costs in the registration and circulation department can be expected as the computer-controlled loan system becomes fully operational. Costs of processing overdue materials are also expected to decline.

By reducing book losses, the electronic detection of materials not properly checked out has resulted in recognizable savings in inventory and replacement costs. No reliable statistics are available for these savings.

The library now has on-line access to the Lockheed-Dialog data bases. As it becomes more fully exploited, savings in reference librarians' time and in the costs of hard-copy reference materials will be realized.

ANNUAL STATISTICAL REPORT

FISCAL YEAR 1980-1981

SEPTEMBER 15, 1981

INTRODUCTION

The Library Department has three MBO programs: library direct services, library acquisitions, and library management. Performance data on the various measures being used indicate, at the end of the report period, that the library is generally meeting its target figures.

Selected performance data are as follows:

Measure	Target	Actual
Total Reference Questions Answered	90%	91%
Requested Titles Owned	85%	93.5%
Population Registered	30%	29%
Cataloging Accuracy	98%	99%
Unit Cost of Book Repair	$4.16	$3.41
Administrative Costs	12.5%	14.25%

There were also some conspicuous failures to meet some of the library's MBO objectives. For example, the target unit cost for patron registration was 36 cents but the actual was $1.10. Better performance can be expected as more and more patrons are registered in the computer circulation system. Another target to reach 2,450 shut-in patrons actually reached none because of the lack of staff and volunteers. The target of presenting 264 adult programs was substantially exceeded, 666 actually took place due to increased funding by The Friends of the Library.

On balance, the library's first year in the MBO program was successful. Further, the experience gained will allow us to refine the program goals and measurements and to set more meaningful targets in reaching them.

INTRODUCTION

The Martin Report. The most important event for the library in fiscal year 1981-82 was the completion of a comprehensive program and expenditure analysis conducted by Dr. Lowell A. Martin, a highly-regarded consultant to urban public library systems.

The charge to Dr. Martin was to assume that the library's future appropriations would provide only for relatively stable purchasing power, and to find a method of providing better library services within that constraint.

His analysis revealed, among other things, that there was a ten-fold discrepancy in cost-effectiveness between larger, busier branches and small, sparsely-stocked agencies. His recommendation was to close ten of the smaller, more redundant branches and reinvest the estimated "savings" of about $825,000 to improve and extend resources and services in the remaining facilities. Seven branches would become "supermarket" libraries, and 9 would become "special-purpose neighborhood libraries".

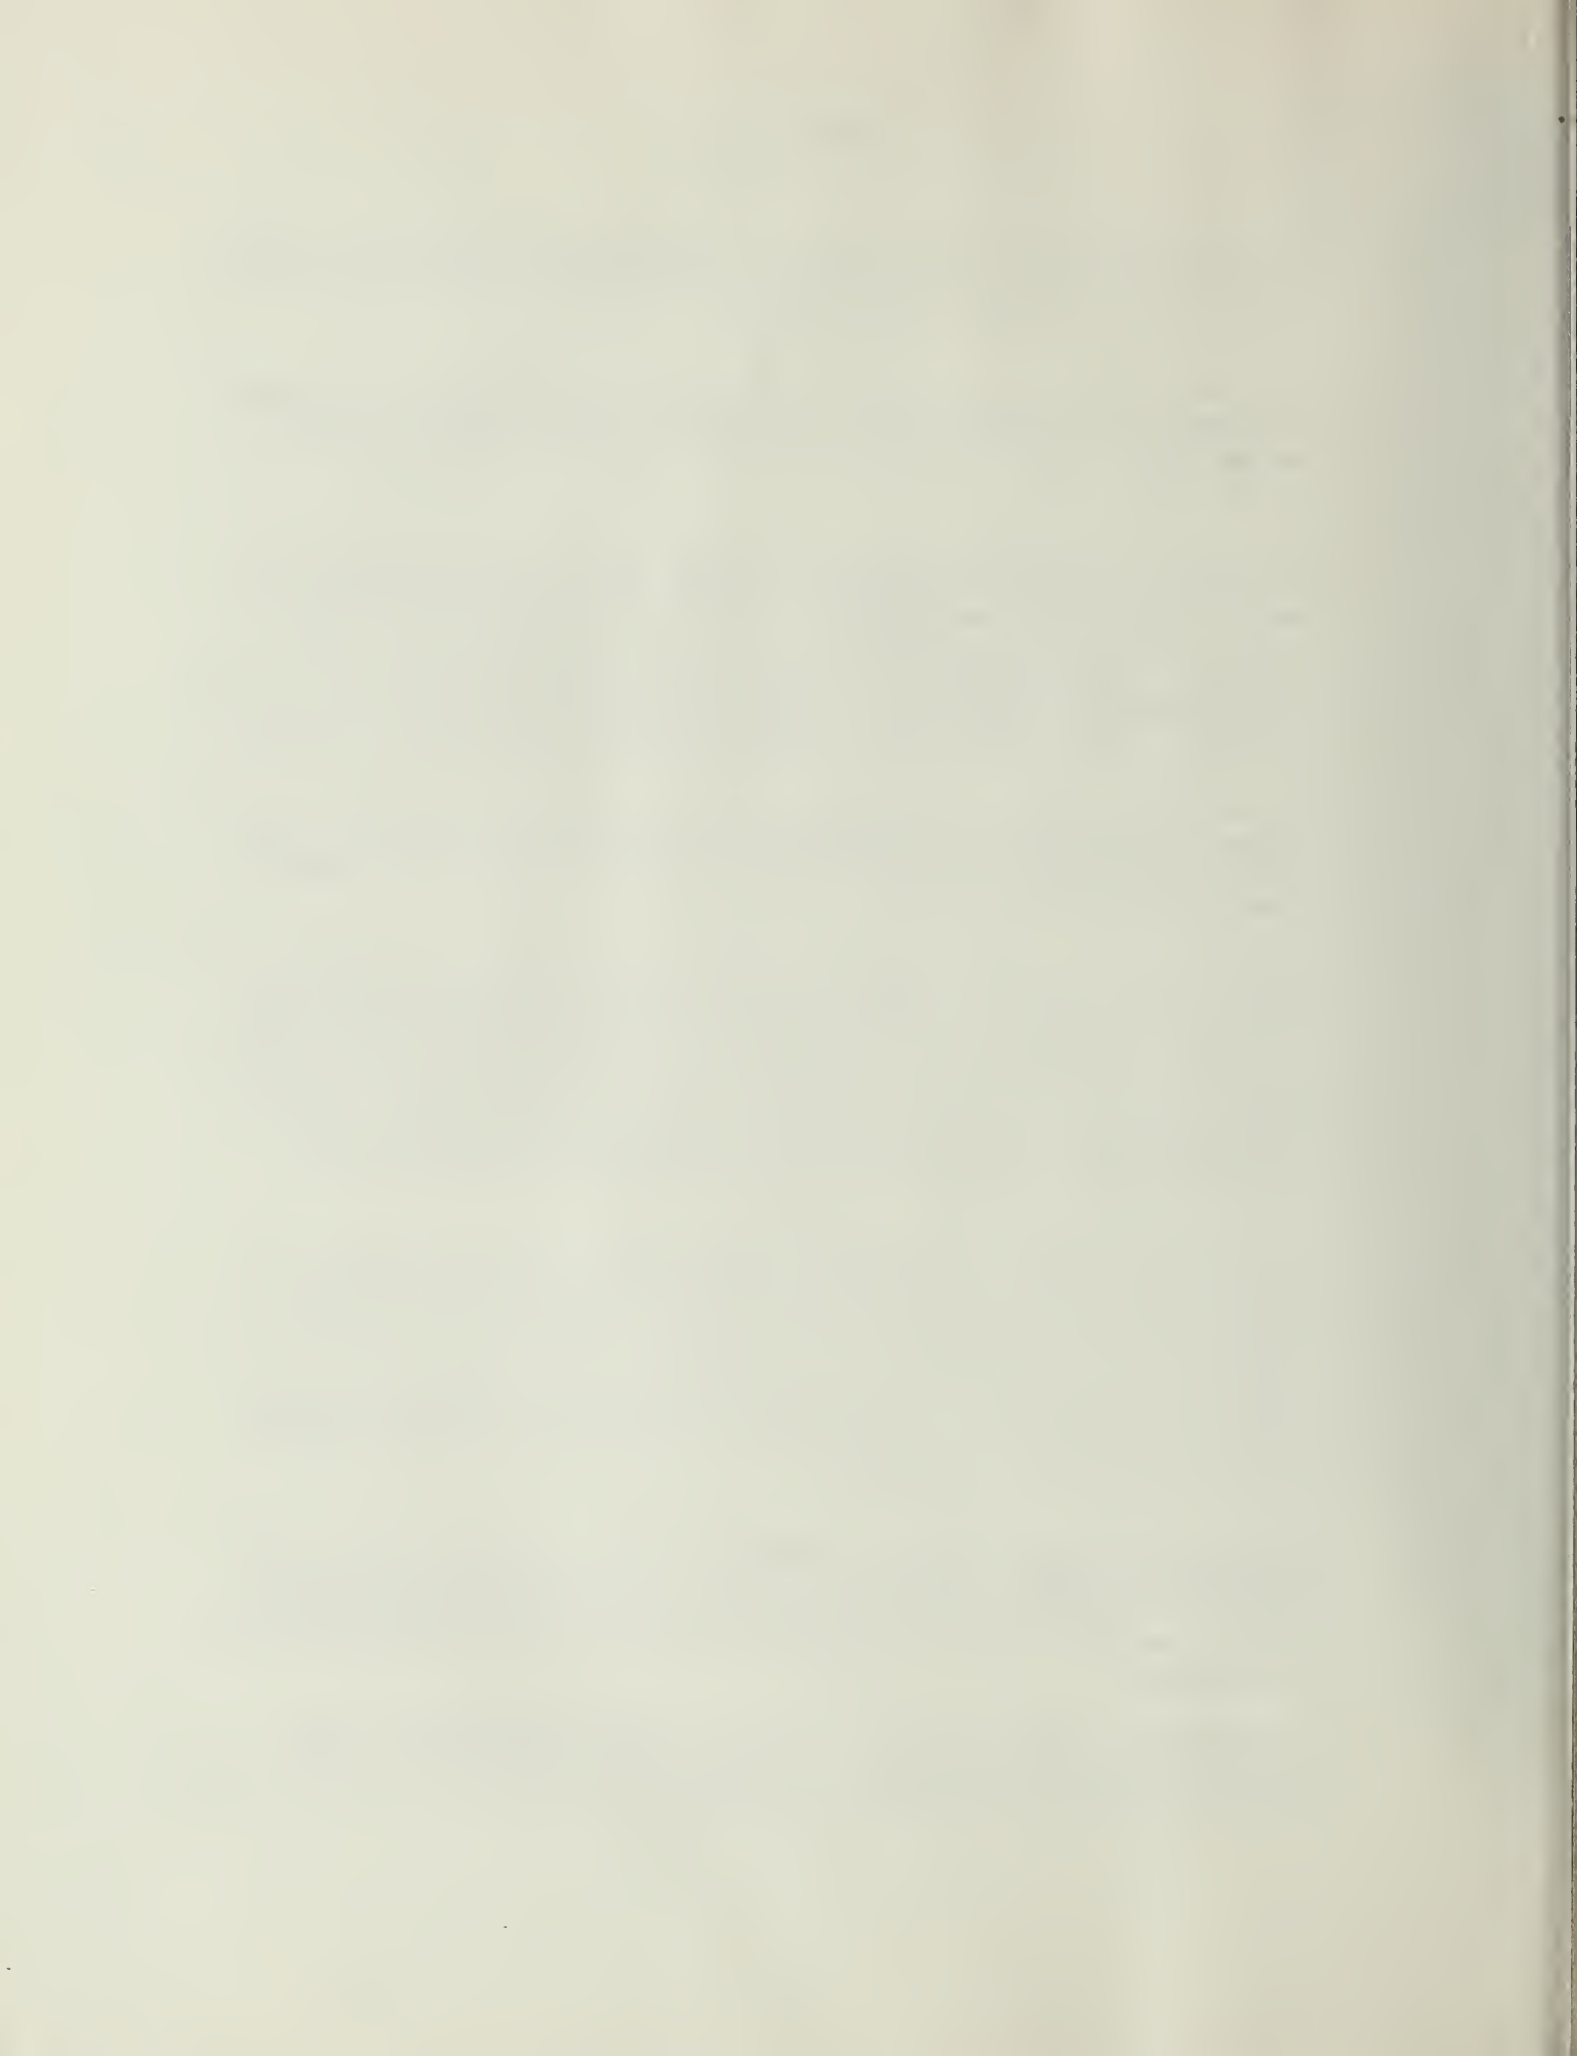

In adopting a budget for 1982-83, the Library Commission made substantial changes in the Martin recommendations by creating a three-tier branch system rather than a two-tier hierarchy and by reducing the number of branches to be closed to six.

Mayor Feinstein, later joined by the Board of Supervisors, decided, as public policy, that no branch libraries would be closed and that the library's budget would be increased sufficiently to keep all branches open and to implement the recommendations relating to the seven "supermarket" libraries. These seven branches and the main library were to begin seven-day service in the fall of fiscal year 1982-83. The increase amounted to $2.6 million, about 29% more than the 1981-82 budget of $9.1 million.

An important legacy of the Martin report was to initiate a rational, broadly-based planning process within the library, concentrating on the branch system, the main library and the automation of library resources and services. Martin's recommendations on the nature of branch services have been used to develop a more realistic and appropriate differentiation of MBO goals and objectives with measurements which will be vastly more helpful in charting the library's programs in branches of different size.

Library Automation. During the report period, two more branches, Richmond and Excelsior, came on-line to CLSI, the automated loan system. About 41% of the library's circulation in 1981-82 was handled through CLSI. When the system is operating at maximum economy, about 93% will be automated.

A useful by-product of CLSI is that its present data base of about 500,000 volumes can be used as an author, title, subject catalog, showing library holdings and locations of materials.

Computer-based reference and research services are now offered on a selective basis with partial subsidy by the Friends of the Library. The first ten minutes of search are conducted free. The patron then pays the actual cost of connect time beyond that. In addition to Lockheed's Dialog data base the library can also search, for example, The New York Times Info Bank, BRS, and Orbit data bases. Almost 200 different data bases are now available on-line.

MBO Measurements. Main Library. The main library substantially met most of the MBO targets: circulation was .95 items per capita, 91% of items requested were owned by the library, but only 42% were actually available at the time of request.

Branch libraries. Branch library performance, aimed last year at uniform MBO targets, varied in direct proportion to the size and services of each. The larger branches reached the target of 3 loans per capita. Chinatown actually reached an average of 6.5 items per capita. Adult and children's programs also reached target levels. In the aggregate, 535 adult programs attracted a total audience of 25,146. More than 1500 programs for children attracted 52,151.

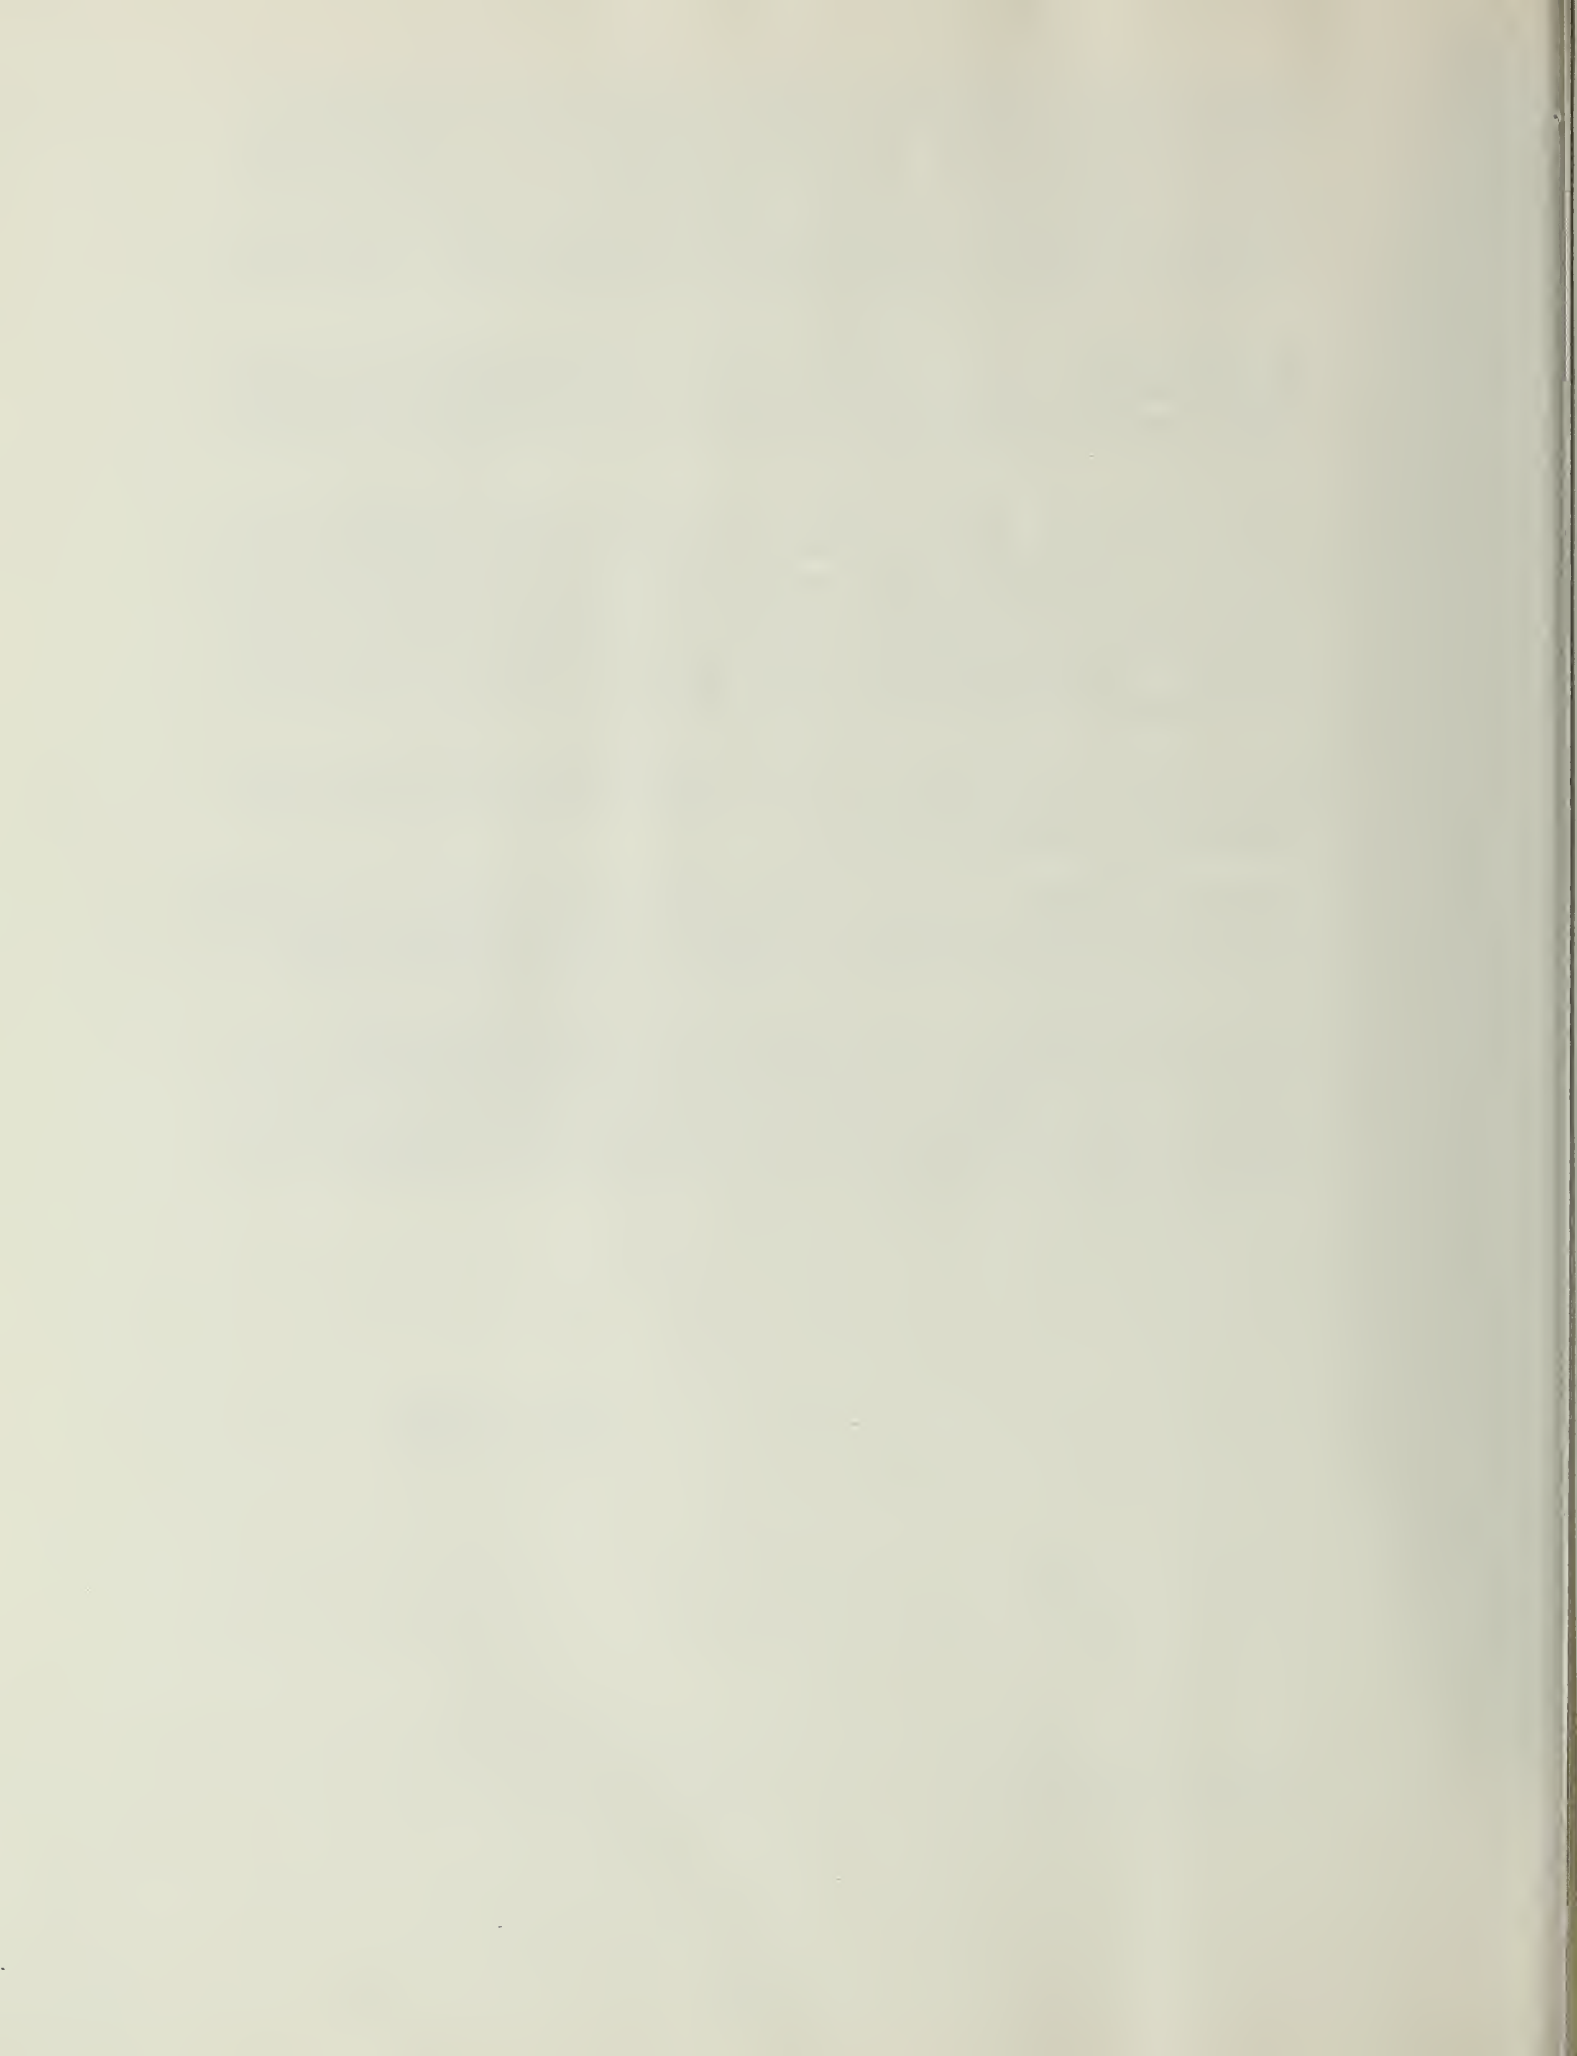

The smallest of the branch libraries, Ingleside, Portola, Ocean View, and Visitacion Valley had the least success in meeting what are now recognized as unrealistic goals.

Technical services. Three of the four MBO targets were met or exceeded. A total of 15,000 books were repaired, 4.2% over the target. Unit repair cost was kept at $3.36 per volume, no increase over 1980-81.

Library Administration. Only one of three MBO targets were met. administrative costs were kept to 6.3% of operating expenditures. The goal was 7.0%. Progress in two important policy areas, collection development and reference referral, was disappointing. However, the impetus provided by the Martin report should yield significant results in these two areas next year.
